

A Moment of Awe from Linda

The Worm Moon

I almost missed sharing this moment of awe with you. You can still see the Worm Moon rising in the eastern sky. It is quite brilliant here in the pacific northwest as the sky is clear

This full moon is called the Worm Moon because the ground begins to soften enough for the earthworms to reappear inviting robins and other birds to feast. This is truly the first sign of spring. The earth awakens from its winter slumber and we welcome the sunnier days. The Worm Moon also has spiritual significance as our positive energy begins to flow with each new blossom. We are entering our strong yang energy.

Thank you all for your kind well wishes,

Peace, Linda
